All about Adélie penguins

Do you know what penguin lives in Antarctica?
It is not an Emperor! It is an Adélie!
In this informative piece I will tell you the description, habitat, diet, and interesting facts about them. Read on to find out more about the Adélie. The Adélie is a wonderful penguin. It will tell you about the description. One fact is they have waterproof feathers. Also they have over laping feathers. In addition, and they are 12 pounds, 27.5 inches. The last fact is they are birds. Let's move on to the habitat. First they live in Antarctica, it is the coldest place on Earth! They survive the whole winter. It is time for the diet. They are carnivores, they are meat eaters. It eats fish, krill, and squid. They swim supper fast to catch their fish. Now I am going to tell you some interesting facts. When a penguin slides on its belly it is called toboganning. Their enemies are killer whales and leoprd seals. Pollution can kill penguins so don't put oil into the water. They live in colonies. That is a group of the same penguins that live together. They have camouflage. When an enemy comes above it looks like dark water, when an enemy comes below it looks like light water. I love the Adelie. I wish I could visit one soon. I told you about the description, habitat, diet, and interesting facts of an Adelie. I wish I could visit an Adelie.

All penguins live in the Southern Hemisphere.
